INTRODUCTION

The spate of insecurity in Nigeria continues unabatedly during the reviewing month, with the experience of wanton destruction of lives and property spread across board. The ceaseless onslaught on security agencies in the South-East and South-South regions is unprecedented and has assumed a worrisome dimension even as the number of casualties on the part of security agencies is on the increase on regular basis. Several Police stations were burnt down, while invaders succeeded in carting away arms and ammunitions, thereby strengthening their attacking capacity. Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) offices across the South East region have become the targets of the suspected separatists, ostensibly to frustrate the conduct of any election in the region as a precursor to achieving their age-long dream of Biafra nation.

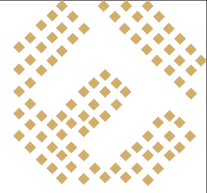

Similarly, the Yoruba nation agitators in the South-West are equally waxing stronger on daily basis against the backdrop of unequivocal endorsement and support they are getting from notable individuals in the region. Their rallies are evident of support they garnered even as they are usually characterized by violence of attacks on security agencies especially at the border areas.

Kaduna was epic center for bandit invasion, wreaking havoc with killings of armless civilians. Series of kidnapping cases and rustling of cattle also pervades the Northern Nigeria in the month under review. Activities of Boko Haram are still as active as ever despite the ousting of Shekau faction from their strongholds in Sambisa. The dominance of ISWAP and possible adoption of more troops from Shekau's camp simply means the challenges on security forces are far from ending. Nevertheless, the remnants of Shekau's faction could also resort to guerilla attacks on ISWAP, while they will not relent in attacking military base for possible acquisition of arms and ammunition even as they have obviously been degraded.

The targeted killings of eminent Nigerians by unknown gunmen is an indicator of a failed system threatening the unity and existence of the nation. The narrative becomes more worrisome as a result of the obvious overwhelmed security agencies especially the Police. Responses to distress calls were very poor which also underscore the ineffective and obsolete Police equipment. Police personnel are seen to be naive and weak with dampened moral, hence, the possibility of a new tactical and strategic approach in the coming month is not in view.

Finally, it is not out of place that the Federal Government should start appraising and re-appraising all identified and obvious areas of discontent with a view to dousing tension in the interest of peace and tranquility in the country.
